Can we translate that?

Ouverts à la marche sur l'eau? On vous comprend

Air TransatLà où les esprits ouverts s'envolent

Yes, but...

- "Ouverts" might be a bit too formal/not colloquial enough. As well as misleading.
- "On vous comprend" is ok, but being closer to "we understand you", it may lack the energy of "We get that".
- "Là où les esprits ouverts s'envolent" is not a bad translation. But I fear it might feel a bit obscure as we don't really use "open mind" in that way.

Prêt à marcher sur l'eau?	Ready to walk on water?	My recommendation. However, I do not recommend inclusive writing in this case. It isn't used in headlines in advertising and most people actually don't really like it as it is confusing and to some, invites ideology.
On est partant	We are game/We are go	Double entendre. We are ready to try with enthusiasm. Alliteration with the tin partant and Transat
1 Air Transat Volez en toute curiosité	Air Transat Fly in all curiosity	The use of the word curiosity is a twist on the expression using "sécurité" (Fly in all safety). So it sounds familiar but original and memorable. It means to be open to dare taking a plane to Canada to satisfy your curiosity.
		Most important there is an alliteration between Transat and curiosité, with the s and t.

2 Air Transat Volez par curiosité	Fly by curiosity	Expression meaning to give it a try but also as a good justification for travelling to Canada. It rhymes.
3 Air Transat Un envol de curiosité	A flight of curiosity	Underlines the many experiences you can encounter through your curiosity
4 Air Transat Faites décoller votre curiosité	Let your curiosity take off.	It rhymes + alliteration
5 Air Transat Là où la curiosité prend son envol	Where curiosity takes a flight.	Expression. Let your curiosity express itself.

6 Air TransatLaissez votre curiosité prendre son envol

Let your curiosity take off

Expression. Indulge your curiosity.

7 Air Transat

Il y a de la curiosité dans l'air

There's curiosity in the air

Expression. Quickly take this occasion to travel and explore Canada armed with curiosity.

8 Air Transat

Attrapez votre curiosité au vol

Catch your curiosité in flight

Expression. Quickly take this occasion to travel to explore Canada armed with curiosity.

9 Air Transat

Là où les plus ouverts s'envolent

Where the most open (minded) fly

Alliterations: plus (s pronounced z) + verts/volent. Expression (les plus ouverts). Closer to the English, however I would not recommend it.
